

Email #5: Exhibition

50 Secrets of Happiness Revealed

Our fifth week, “Secrets of Happiness Revealed” is all about presenting your findings to the world.

We’re nearing the end of this project! You have examined happiness from all kinds of perspectives, including by collecting data on your own happiness experiment. Maybe you feel like you have happiness all figured out now, or maybe you feel like your quest is just beginning. No matter where you’re at, this week it’s time to share what you’ve learned with the world.

This week, we’re going to present our work in an online exhibition of learning. We have invited information designers to review our final products and share their favorites on their social media.

Activities

Prepare a short (less than 2 minutes!) presentation of learning. In your presentation, you need to answer two questions: What steps did you take to create this artwork? After everything you’ve learned in this project, what is your personal philosophy of happiness?

Share the draft of your presentation of learning with your group to get their feedback.

Record yourself doing a short presentation of learning. You can record yourself talking with a Google slideshow, as an overlay of a short video, or just record yourself talking!

Assignment

Submit the recording of your final presentation of learning.

If you haven’t already, make sure to submit your final artwork to me by Thursday to display in our virtual gallery.

Next Steps

- Be sure to email in your assignments by Wednesday!
- Questions or concerns? Contact me or one of your group members!
- See you at our project exhibition on Thursday! We go live at 5:00PM, so plan to sign on by 4:45PM at the latest!